"Recensione Boelts blends themes of teasing, embarrassment and disappointment with kindness and generosity in a realistic interracial school scenario. Kirkus Reviews Maribeth Boelts has a good eye for how the shoes bestow value at school and how Jeremy feels wearing an uncool pair. Much to discuss, especially in the ending. Chicago Tribune Whether children are on the shoe-owning or the shoe-envying side of the economic line, they can sympathize with Jeremy and rejoice in the way he eventually resolves his problem with his too-small shoes. The Horn Book Jones' autumn-toned illustrations wonderfully complement Boelts' sweet-natured main characters and non-didactic life lesson. Booklist A wonderful story of sharing, this important book conveys what is most important in life. Kendal Rautzhan's Books to Borrow, Books to Buy? column A touching story about how a life short on money can be big on love, good values, and friendship. Young Children Maribeth Boelts introduces young readers to [a] complex issue with kindness and finesse. Grand Rapids Press In this witty, wise picture book Boelts presents a kids-eye view of a consumer fad that rages through school at gale force. ?Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books (starred review)A poignant, thought-provoking book. ?School Library JournalA contemporary urban story that shows the spirit of sharing with economy of language and superior craftsmanship. ?Contra Costa TimesPeer pressure, overwhelming desire, and the acceptance of what is really needed are played out in this story that is duplicated in schools around the country. ?Library Media Connection L'autore Maribeth Boelts is a former preschool teacher who has written numerous books for children. She lives in Iowa with her husband and three children.Noah Z. Jones is the illustrator of NOT NORMAN: A GOLDFISH STORY, THE MONSTER IN THE BACKPACK, and WELCOME TO THE BED AND BISCUIT. He lives in Maine."
