"Recensione 'The Last of the Light is both a celebration of and inquiry into the significance of temperature and skies . . . Davidson takes us to places that are vast and lovely as well as somehow underlit and shadowy, where a kind of emptiness and uncertainty prevails . . . Here exactly is the tone and spirit of this book, ideas illuminated on the pages and in illustrations and colour plates which encourage our eyesight to become acute in the way it is at the end of the day, seeing everything so clearly before it falls back into shadow, for now one last hour, one hour more.' --Kirsty Gunn, The Guardian'Peter Davidson's intricate meditation on twilight in European art and literature . . . is at once richly satisfying and as elusive as a ghost . . . Like all good writers, he reveals the sheer strangeness of much that our eyes usually slide over.' --Literary Review'These days, you'd expect an author just to google 'twilight' and pile up everything he finds. Not Davidson;

this is a deep and personal meditation, and while some references, particularly to painters, might be obvious (Atkinson Grimshaw, Caspar David Friedrich, Whistler) most are not . . . Davidson ranges right across the disciplines in his search for allusions, citing Ruskin, Rilke, Chopin, Kant and Vanbrugh along the way. The result is revealing, poetic and (unavoidably) illuminating. As a bonus, the book is beautifully and copiously illustrated.' --The Independent L'autore Peter Davidson has taught at the universities of Aberdeen, Leiden, and Warwick. He is the author Distance and Memory, The Palace of Oblivion, and The Idea of North, the latter published by Reaktion Books."
